Philip G. Roeder is a professor of political science at the University of California, San Diego. His research focuses on nationalism with special attention to the Soviet successor states. He is the author of Where Nation-States Come From: Institutional Change in the Age of Nationalism; Red Sunset: The Failure of Soviet Politics; and Soviet Political Dynamics. He is also the co-author of Postcommunism and the Theory of Democracy and co-editor of Sustainable Peace: Power and Democracy After Civil Wars (with Donald Rothchild). His most recent article, “Partition as a Solution to Wars of Nationalism: The Importance of Institutions” (co-authored with Thomas Chapman), appears in the November issue of APSR. His current research project is tentatively entitled Alternatives to Independence: The Consequences of Institutional Responses to Secessionism.

The Andrew W. Mellon Sawyer Seminar on Power-Sharing in Deeply Divided Places explores power-sharing and evaluates its role in as a standard prescription for protracted conflicts in deeply divided territories, especially when there are antagonistic self-determination claims.
